PRIMARY PARLIAMENT OUTDOOR LEARNING PROJECT

The Primary Pupil Parliament involves the whole primary and meets at least once a month. Last spring the primary pupil parliament started talking about improving the outdoor areas around the school. Lots of ideas were shared and we made plans to tackle this big project in phases. Phase one would involve working on two areas; specifically, to help create a friendship garden and an outdoor learning space. The Pupil parliament came up with 5 main aims for the project these are the aims:

- To make the school a better place
- And a happier place
- To make more friendships
- To discover and learn
- Help the environment

Steve Weaver helped us by giving us guidance for the learning space and shared some ideas during the initial meetings. We aim to create a flattened area at the back of the school and to try and get the pond re-instated and waterfall working again along with creating an area for planting and sitting at the front of the school.

Mrs Groat, applied to Cooke Aquaculture for some funding for the project and we are delighted to say that on 2^{nd} October 2019, two representatives from Cooke Aquaculture came to the school and presented us with a giant cheque for £3985. Their names were Sara and Erlend. The money they gave us will help us to begin the process of making our school a better, happier and friendlier place than it already is.

We would like to say a big thank you to Cooke Aquaculture for their support.

RECENT BIRD SIGHTINGS

A very mixed month regarding unusual birds, and as usual we always seemed to be in the wrong place when rarities were found! Three Waxwings (probably the most beautiful winter visitor to the UK) were seen in the first 10 days of October – one by Catherine in Whitehall Village; another by Hazel at Airy, and the third by Mark at Fingeo. As is usual, the birds seemed to have a quick meal of the available berries (Rowan or Rosehips) and then made a rapid departure, never to be seen again!

Easterly winds in early October brought several other unusual birds among the Redwings and other thrushes (mainly Blackbird and Song Thrush) including two or three Ring Ouzels; 4 Yellow-browed Warblers, and a Red-breasted Flycatcher (see photo). The latter was found feeding in the Osen garden – in the very same Rosa rugosa bushes as the even rarer Collared Flycatcher of May. With careful planning – and hard work – David Hudson has developed a wonderfully attractive garden to a wide range of migrant bird species at Osen and has now recorded well over a hundred species from his house.

From then on, there were occasional surprises – none more so than the Tree Sparrow found by visitor Ken Barclay and myself in Lower Whitehall. Just the 4th island record! Brambling arrived in good numbers (a small party still in residence among the Samson-lane potatoes) and by the 20th, Robins had arrived in typical numbers – 1 per average 'cottage' garden; 2 or 3 per farmhouse & steading. A warm spell in mid-month was greeted by several Skylarks singing and 2 Red Admiral butterflies were seen. One interesting sighting mid-month was a party of five Herons flying in from the east at considerable height.

A further drop in the Greylag Goose numbers has resulted in more and more arrivals of the former wintering species to the island, the most obvious being the Whooper Swans towards the south end of the island, and assorted duck, including Red-breasted Merganser and Long-tailed Duck – both 'salt=water' species. Golden Plover numbers have increased again this year and re-colonised the open farmland in good numbers – including one flock of over 400 in the Banks area recently.

Many thanks for all the calls. John Holloway

STEPHEN CLACKSON'S LETTER FROM SCHOOL PLACE

Reporting on the endeavours of your councillor on your behalf

Sadly, my mother passed away towards the end of September in Somerset. Travelling down and back to attend the funeral and spending time there with family naturally had an impact on some of my councillor duties this month. I was not able to take part in this year's Orkney College graduation ceremony, nor was I able to participate in the Special General Meeting convened to consider the national-development-level planning application for the erection of a substation in Firth. Also, I was absent from the events commemorating the 80th anniversary of the sinking of HMS Royal Oak (of which my uncle was a casualty).

Selected comments I made at the Policy & Resources Committee meeting about OIC's response to its "climate emergency" declaration were quoted in a letter to The Orcadian (10th October)—conveniently omitting the point that I was making at the meeting. In my reply (The Orcadian, 17th October), I stated that I believe OIC should be taking immediate practical steps to mitigate the effects of climate change on Orkney's vulnerable communities. "Declaring a climate emergency" is not going keep the sea from washing into the houses at Whitehall in Stronsay, any more than King Cnut sitting on the village's inadequate sea defences would. The significant contribution Orkney is already making in the renewable-energy sector is a far more relevant declaration of our commitment to a climate-friendly future than OIC climbing aboard the "climate-emergency-declaration" bandwagon. In my opinion, a financially-supported pledge by OIC to protect the inevitable victims of climate change in our islands would be of considerably more value to the people of Orkney than trendy virtue signalling.

On the topic of renewable energy, I suggested at the meeting that the fairest way to distribute the profits from the proposed Orkney Community Wind Farm Project would be to endeavour to use the money to set our Council Tax rate to zero. On OIC's Annual Equality Outcomes Progress Report, my comment was: if we are serious about sustaining our remote communities during a climate emergency, then we need to get on with the review of council jobs appropriate to being undertaken remotely.

An internal audit report came before the Monitoring & Audit Committee on the burial grounds fiasco. (The reinstatement of the headstones in Shapinsay is due to take place in November.) I recommended that in future we maybe specify the type of gravestone permitted to be erected in our graveyards, and I advocated the traditional Viking "hogback" style as presenting the least danger to the public. (It cannot fall on anyone, although it could possibly constitute a trip hazard.) An ancient example may be found in the St. Boniface kirkyard on Papa Westray, and a modern example in Sanday's Burness graveyard.

A modern hogback gravestone in Burness graveyard, Sanday

The idea of hosting a climate change event in Orkney was discussed at the General Meeting of the Council. I cautioned that the County might not be prepared for the on-slaught of demonstrations that could accompany such an event (from e.g. "Extinction Rebellion") and the consequent security, policing and cost implications. In the final item on the agenda, about Council participation in a 4/5G mobile innovation project, which we had agreed to hold in public, I proposed we suspend standing orders in order to enable Cllr. Woodbridge to fully participate remotely from North Ronaldsay. I am pleased to say I had the requisite support from two-thirds of the councillors.

Other meetings I have attended this month include a seminar on the future of 5G, a meeting of the Local Housing Strategy Working Group, a meeting of the Orkney & Shetland Valuation Joint Board (by video-conferencing), a members' political session, a meeting of Sanday Community Council, and a presentation by EMEC.

RECORDS OF A BYGONE AGE

With Remembrance Day and all it signifies fast approaching, I thought it would be appropriate to record here some of the memories of a Stronsay man who fought in the trenches in the Great War. This is part of a transcript made by William Spence of Airy and Lower Millfield in the early 1970s and passed on to me by Ingram Shearer.

The first of these memories is in relation to the Artillery Volunteers, a Corps of which had originally been formed in Stronsay in 1865. Born at Waterside on 8th July 1897, I don't think William Spence would have been directly involved with the Volunteers but, like so many young men of that generation, he was destined to join the army and go to war. On 4th December 1915, at the age of 18, he enlisted with the Machine Gun Corps of the Seaforth Highlanders. This is his story:

"At this time the country was very edgy; they were calling for volunteers to come forward, those volunteers responding in very large numbers and being drilled in Drill Halls, like the one that is here, hence the name Drill Hall. With an army sergeant doing the drilling very expertly they had to do rifle firing at targets and compete with one another. You can still see the target area between Schoolbrae and Sandybank. I don't know if they got any pay but I do know that they were sometimes taken down to Budden on the East Coast (Angus) and from there they were allowed a visit to Edinburgh which was for them the highlight of their time in the South. In many cases it would be the only time this would happen. Each company had a Captain in charge with a lieutenant under him to take part in competition in Kirkwall with other companies. The Captain here in Stronsay at that time was Captain Chalmers of Sandybank and his lieutenant was James Peace of the shop.

They had one especially big night which was called the Volunteers' Ball. They were specially dressed for the occasion - white gloves a must! It was also a special night for their lady friends. Firstly, the Grand March was an absolute must with the Master of Ceremonies conducting it properly. There were some very good fiddlers here at that time, two of whom I will mention were James Miller, Millbank and John Cock at Linkshouse. As to the ladies present, quite a number felt very important at this special occasion. Now all the men taking part were from all parts of the island, so it came about that the ladies too came from all parts of the island with their partners.

After a time this stopped as the country got into a more settled state with the signs of war receding throughout the world. Volunteers were called up, sent out from islands to other islands or to the mainland of Orkney. Then volunteers from different parts of Orkney came to Stronsay resulting in Stronsay ladies meeting and marrying men from all over Orkney. Fresh blood brought to the island!

At this time in Stronsay most families were of six or seven children. The Coopers of Holland and the Moodies with large families made a lively place. With all the numbers in the south end, it did fill up the South School. After having training in the South Miss Elizabeth Fotheringhame of Hescombe taught classes of up to 14 in different age groups and I am proud to say I was one of them. We did up to a certain standard before going on to the Central School with a teacher named Mr McCallum and his daughter Miss McCallum. I got on very well with her, not so well with the others. She could make you sit up and take notice. They left here and went to the West Coast but later Bella and I met Miss McCallum in Edinburgh.

Now leading up to the start of the First World War: All young men at the age of 18 were called up to serve in the Navy, Army or Airforce. It was the Seaforth Highlanders laid out for the Orkney men, the Seaforth Highlanders being part of the famous 51st Division which took part in some of the fiercest battles with heavy losses of men killed and wounded.

I was attached to the 15th Scottish Division which took part in fierce battles too. I remember being in the trenches at the town of Ypres which was razed to the ground by German batteries. But France, being a chalky country, there were lots of underground places which were quite safe from battery fire.

While in the trenches I was ordered to fetch water up from the town. There was a certain point which you had to go through called "Hellfire Corner". I thought to myself I would wait till the next round of firing was over and make a dash for it. I tried this but it didn't work for I arrived at this position just as they opened fire. I threw myself to the ground without getting hurt. I carried on my way with the two cans, as I thought, arriving back at my place in the trenches. As I felt thirsty and instead of taking a drink from a mug, I lifted the can to my mouth and, what do you think, it was petrol! What a dreadful taste and the burning feeling was awful. That happened in the evening and I thought I should see a doctor but by morning everything felt normal again.

I remember on one occasion going up to the front line, the German batteries opened fire, the officer in charge shouted "Take cover!" We scrambled into shell holes for safety. After the shelling stopped a shout went up "two men buried". The men were in a shell hole and a German shot landed right alongside then burying them completely. Immediately at the scene we started scraping away the earth with our bare hands. First we came on a steel helmet. Fortunately we got them out alive but one suffered from shell shock and was sent back to base. The other man came forward with us to the front line.

Both sides had first class snipers. They took advantage of anyone showing themselves out of the trenches. We lost one of our men, shot through the head. He came from Newcastle. I just should mention that two of our volunteers went back at night to give him a decent burial. That just shows the respect men have for life doesn't it?

At certain times it was decided to get over and beat the Germans in their trenches. This could be a deadly affair. Getting out onto the open ground between the two where we had no cover or protection. I remember we were told we were going "over the top" as it was called, the time to be 4 o' clock in the morning - when it was reckoned to be the most promising time to do it. At 4 o' clock we got a tot of rum - it was strong stuff! Over we went after a terrific bombardment by our guns. I remember meeting a German with his hands above his head in surrender. I can still hear one of our men saying "shoot him" but he was pulled up sharply by our corporal to do no such thing as the German was being escorted back to base as a prisoner of war. The casualties during this war were terrific on both sides, the land here being very flat and, after a period of rain and with the shell holes, it became a sea of mud. If wounded you stood a poor chance of survival. 2 or 3 days was all you were able to stand in the front line. You were pulled back and others took your place.

Back at base we got a bath and supplied with clean clothes. They were desperately needed as we were crawling with lice. One of the places was a small farm. We slept in the farm buildings. They kept hens and it was very tempting so we made up our minds to get a hold of one of the hens and cook it. We managed it too although the plucking and cooking was a problem but it was achieved. I wonder if the French folks missed it? I expect they would but I never heard any more about it. One of the things I was most impressed with was a threshing mill, the horse walking up an incline, the weight of the horse driving this mill.

The French people suffered heavily, parts of their land were overrun. They had to get out to other parts of the country. That is one thing in this country which hasn't happened partly because of the seas around us and our determination to defend our country to the bitter end.

After about a year in France I developed a bad throat. I reported to a doctor and after having a swab taken he suspected diphtheria. At that time this was a deadly disease and they didn't have the medicines to control it like they do nowadays. I was sent across the water to Bradford, England. My papers didn't follow me saying what was wrong but a nurse suspected also, after taking a swab, that I was seriously ill. One day one of the nurses asked me for my home address. I replied by saying "is it as bad as that?" I told myself there and then "I am getting better" and shortly I did. One doctor told me afterwards that I had made a remarkable recovery but it did take time and the effects told on my heart.

It was nearing the end of the war when I was marked down 'C' and given a pension of 7 shillings a week which was to last for 5 years but I was able to do some work and also I took part in football, etc.

On his demobilisation papers in 1919 he is shown as being transferred to the army reserve as a Category B3 - "Only suitable for sedentary work." FLETCHER SAGA

Shortly after we (Bruce & Maureen Fletcher) moved here in April 2004 I began writing a blog entitled "The Fletcher Saga" about our first experiences of life on Stronsay, it was one of several blogs that appeared on the BBC Scotland website. Alas that part of the website disappeared thanks to "cut backs". Here's a brief extract, written a couple of years after we arrived on Stronsay:

Wed 8 Feb 2006

In the middle of January our elderly oil-fired boiler and kitchen stove finally gave up the struggle and ceased to work. A new boiler soon arrived from Kirkwall and Jim Holland, our local haulier, manhandled the packing case into our utility room to await the arrival of a plumber to remove the old boiler and fit the new one. Yesterday evening the new boiler started working for its living. The house is now warm and cosy again with the exception of the kitchen which is quite cool because the new boiler has no "waste" heat like the old stove; a new radiator in the kitchen is the next priority.

When we lived in Brora, Sutherland in the 1970s the Church of Scotland minister (Rev Charles Abel) emigrated to Australia. 30 years later we got in touch on the Internet and have exchanged emails for the last year or two. One day towards the end of January we a got telephone call from his son to say that he was on the Kirkwall to Stronsay ferry and would be arriving at about 6:30 pm! We knew that he was visiting Orkney because his father had been the minister at Hoy & Walls but did not think he would have time to visit us. We had no beds aired or made up and at that time our oil-fired stove was still out of action. Maureen swung into action and a bed was soon made up, the electric fan-heater was switched and we were ready to receive our visitor. At 5 pm, we got a telephone call from the Stronsay harbour master to say that the ferry had turned back to Kirkwall because of mechanical problems. This ferry was the one that would have stayed overnight in Stronsay and was the ferry that I would have caught at 7 am to go to Kirkwall to get the car exhaust fixed in Stromness. As this is the refit period there only two boats in use instead of the usual three so we expected the ferry timetable to be re-shuffled. However, the harbour master telephoned back later to say that the ferry company hoped to have a boat at Stronsay between 07:00 am and 07:15. Sure enough, the ferry arrived at Stronsay quay at 7 am, having left Kirkwall at 5:30 am! I travelled to Kirkwall, got the car exhaust fixed and managed to meet the minister's son for a lunchtime drink before catching the ferry back to Stronsay left at 4 pm.

There are many pleasant distractions on Stronsay. Yesterday I saw two black lambs as I drove to the shop (my first early lambs this year) and we heard Surrey "growl" for the first time - Surrey's growl occurred as she was sat looking out of the kitchen window at two other cats squaring up for a fight and miaowing furiously at each other.

As we were driving back from the kirk last Sunday we stopped the car a few yards from the house and parked so that we could watch some seals basking on the rocks that were being exposed as the tide ebbed. However, later that day and halfway through cooking Sunday lunch the Calor gas bottle feeding the cooker ran out. It was only then that I realised that I had forgotten to replenish the spare Calor gas bottle.

HOME

By Ellie Harrison

It was thirty years in the growing, The copse around our home Where we've kept the home fires burning, Never tempted to roam. A labour of love it's been. From feathered, furry or otherwise, To the simplistic Orkney vole To the wisest of all owls. It's a safe haven for many a soul So then how will I ever leave it? As some day I must, Hoping with heartfelt sincerity That it falls into the hands of trust. Meanwhile I sit by its tranquil pond Enjoying the last of the warm summer days, Sipping a full-bodied wine; Nostalgic yet full of praise For didn't we pull hard together, Mother Nature and I from the start? Not always agreeing on the outcome But with the best of wills at heart. And as the wren nestled in the willows Calls to his many neighbours For it was here that he hatched out And remains to carry out his labours. Thirty years now seem as a day Whilst the woodland grows in all glory And life lived to the full by all. And produced a wonderful story. No rolling stones, no grass is greener For this was home from the start. No regrets, no complaints for the Copse with a croft at its heart.

FOR SALE

Waterhall, Lower Whitehall Road, KW17 2AS

contact the Orkney Property Centre Kirkwall or https://tinyurl.com/yxqkjpml for details

According to Gibson Waterhall was occupied in the 17th century. It appears on ancient maps perhaps because Mrs Trail estranged wife of the Sanday Esquire got a name for herself in Court. She did well out of the Kelp industry. The rear cottage is probably early 19th century and was formerly thatched. The late Mrs Chalmers of Rose Cottage gave me a photo of the front before the late 20th century extension, which now has yellow external insulation. The garage roof came off in the gale last winter, hit the caravan and took a bit of the workshop roof as well on route into Ingram's field. Fortunately no persons or animals were hurt.

All our houses have histories and hopefully one day a local archive will bring together deeds, photos etc. I shall go on clearing/working at Waterhall until it is sold.

KIRK CORNER

Locum minister—Scott Daily. Manse telephone 616286

I wanted to intentionally keep this short because I really want you to read these words and promises of Jesus Christ, as written in the Gospel of Matthew 11:28-30 "Come to me, all you who are weary and burdened, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me, for I am gentle and humble in heart, and you will find rest for your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

I often feel that I must think of some clever argument or illustration to write in these pieces to try and convince people to come to church. But the truth is I can't do that, nor in fact should that be my goal. While I would love to see more people in church it is not for any personal gain, though I would be absolutely blessed by having more attend, it really is because I think all would benefit from it. The church should be a place where the hurt-ing and suffering come to meet with God and learn of His goodness and love for them.

Recently I was able to attend, with a few other representatives from different faiths and religions, some of the events for the opening of the lovely little Sanctuary at the new Balfour Hospital in Kirkwall. I was reminded that a hospital is a place where we should expect to see two things: people should come in who are unwell, hurting, or suffering in some way, and there should be signs of improvement. That is also how church is intended to be. People who are hurting or suffering should be welcomed in, and as all of us come before the great Physician and surrender ourselves into the skilled hands of our Creator and Healer, we should improve. That means of course there would and should be people at different stages within the church, as this side of heaven there are no perfect people. But that all of us should be moving toward being healed and helped by God.

If you are weary, burdened and hurting, come to Jesus. Our Good Shepherd will come to you and carry you in His arms and give you rest. If you feel unable or unwilling to come to church, then please contact me and I will willingly make a "house call" and help you come to the Doctor. Or make an "appointment" yourself simply by praying to God.

Every blessing and peace to you, Scott Daily, your locum minister
